THE DAILY TEXAN

Department of History

Speaking as individuals, the undersigned members of The Department of History heartily join with other faculty and staff of the University in protesting the continued racial segregation policies of certain business establishments on the Drag.

Although we readily recognize the right of a man to conduct his own business, we also feel that in these days of concern for our freedom, racial segregation, quite aside from its moral indefensibility, is a practice that we can no longer afford.

As members and customers of the University community we gladly go on record in urging these Drag merchants to join in the struggle for human goodness and human liberty and assure them that we will continue to patronize them if they will open their establishments to all Americans.
